June 24, 2020 STATE LAWS

Updated July 30, 2020

How to Comply With Key CCPA Notice and Consumer Request Requirements By Hilary Lane, Quarles & Brady

On June 1, 2020, after four iterations and several rounds of comments, the California Office of the Attorney General (AG) submitted the final text of the California Consumer Privacy Act Regulations (the Regulations) to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). This article highlights some of the CCPA's key requirements regarding notices to consumers and handling consumer requests to exercise their rights to know and delete and offers steps to take to prepare for enforcement. See also CSLR's two-part series examining the CPPA close-up: "Review of Amendments and How to Prepare for Compliance"

(Oct. 2, 2019); and "The GLBA Carve-Out and How Financial Institutions Can Evaluate Applicability" (Oct. 9, 2019). Timing and Procedural History of the Regulations Under the CCPA, effective on January 1, 2020, the California legislature granted regulatory enforcement authority to the AG and required the AG to adopt regulations to further its purposes. The AG released its first proposed regulations in October 2019. Following public comment periods that generated thousands of pages of comments and included four public hearings, the AG issued substantially revised regulations in February 2020, and, after another round of comments, released a second modified version in March 2020. With a July 1, 2020 enforcement date and deadline for promulgating regulations, the final proposed regulations were issued on June 1, and they are virtually identical to the March responses to the comments received during the rule-making process and provides some insight into the AG's reasoning. See also "The Growing Role of State AG in Privacy Enforcement" (Nov. 28, 2018).

typically has 30 working days to complete its review of the proposed regulations. Two executive orders issued by Governor Gavin Newsom in response to COVID-19 give the OAL an additional 120 days if needed. Thus, the OAL has until November 13, 2020 to approve the Regulations.

by the OAL and filed with the Secretary of State. The OAL

Approval Process Could Delay Effective Date

Generally, regulations filed with the Secretary of State become effective on the first day of the quarter after they are approved. However, earlier effective dates can be granted for good cause.

The Regulations become effective and enforceable once approved

The AG asked the OAL to expedite the review process to complete its review within 30 business days and also requested that the Regulations become effective upon approval, citing the July 1 deadline for adopting the regulations as good cause to justify the expedited timeline. It is uncertain if the OAL will expedite its review or if it will grant the AG's request that they become effective upon approval. Enforcement Will Not Wait

Regardless of whether the OAL grants the AG's request for expedited review and approval, the AG has authority to enforce the statutory requirements under the CCPA starting July 1, 2020.

Despite calls from industry groups to delay enforcement of CCPA in light of the COVID-19 pandemic, the AG declined to extend the enforcement date, noting in its press release that "[b]usinesses have had since January 1 to comply with the law, and we are committed to enforcing it starting July 1." In a June 30, 2020 alert, the AG reminded consumers of their rights under the CCPA and provided guidance - including a shareable graphic explaining how to exercise those rights. The alert also reaffirmed the AG's commitment to enforcing the law starting July 1.

cslawreport.com

The CCPA requires that the privacy policy include, among

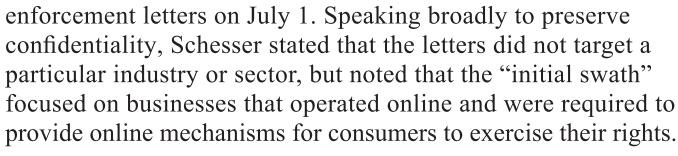

The Regulations require that the privacy policy include:

other things, information about the categories of information collected, disclosed and sold and a description of consumers'

Contents and Delivery of the Privacy Policy rights under the CCPA.

consumers in the preceding 12 months; the categories of sources from which the personal information was collected; the categories of personal information collected about the business or commercial purpose for collecting or Schesser specifically mentioned the right to opt out of the sale of personal information and stated that businesses that are selling personal information that do not have a clear and conspicuous DO NOT SELL link should cure as quickly as possible. The businesses that received notices have 30 days to cure the alleged violations. If they do not cure, the AG could launch a confidential investigation or an enforcement action. We should learn more on July 31 when the cure period expires.

steps to comply with the requirements under the Regulations when they become effective. See also "Privacy Settings May Serve as One- Step CCPA Opt-Out From Sale" (Cybersecurity Law Report,

The key takeaway is that businesses should be prepared to meet the CCPA statutory requirements and should consider taking Additionally, businesses that collect personal information must provide a notice at or before collection, informing consumers of the categories of personal information to be collected and the purposes for which the categories will be used (Notice of Collection). The Regulations include requirements and guidance, some of

The CCPA requires all businesses to have a privacy policy.

to the substance of the notices and how the notices should be presented. Cybersecurity Law Report which appear to go beyond the language of the statute, relating selling personal information; the categories of personal information the business has disclosed for a business purpose or sold to third parties in the preceding 12 months; and for each category identified, the categories of third parties to whom the information was disclosed or sold.

Additionally, the Regulations require that the policy describe the

The privacy policy should be posted online through a conspicuous link using the word "privacy" on the business's website or on the download or landing page of a mobile application. Additional categories "in a manner that provides consumers a meaningful understanding of the information being collected," why it was collected or sold, and the type of third party to which information is disclosed or sold.

provisions regarding the policy provide: Mobile applications may also include a link to the privacy policy in the application's settings menu. If the business has a California-specific description of consumers' privacy rights on its website, the privacy

cslawreport.com

to where the notice can be found online.

Telephone or in person. Provide notice orally.

The AG confirms in the FSOR that businesses have discretion to are "some of the ways in which the business can make the notice craft the notices and privacy policy in a way that the consumer understands them.

determine how to provide notice in various contexts that these Offline. Include notice on printed forms that collect personal information, provide a paper version of the notice, or post prominent signage directing consumers

A business that does not operate a website should make the privacy policy "conspicuously available" to consumers. The privacy policy must be available in a format that allows a consumer to print it out as a document.

policy should be included in that description.

readily available to consumers in a variety of contexts" The AG further states that the use of the term "may" allows businesses discretion in determining the best way to communicate the required information and provides them with the flexibility to

With respect to employment-related information, the notice does not need to include the Do Not Sell link or the link to the privacy policy. And a business that does not collect personal information directly from the consumer does not need to provide a notice at collection if it does not sell the consumer's consumers will encounter it at or before the point of collection of any personal information. The Regulations provide "illustrative

The notice at collection must be readily available where

- notice on the introductory page of its website and on all webpages where personal information is collected. May be provided through a link to the section of the privacy policy containing the required information. Mobile applications. Provide a link on the mobile application's download page and within the application, such as through the application's settings menu.
- Cybersecurity Law Report An Acuris company obtaining affirmative authorization from the parent or in to the sale of their personal information.

personal information; and guardian of children under 13 years old to sell their allowing minors between the ages of 13 and 16 to opt Disclosures About Consumers' Rights and Processes for Minors The Regulations also require more detailed disclosures with respect to consumers' rights including: instructions for submitting a verifiable request to know or delete, which link to an online request form or portal for making the request, if either are offered; use to verify the consumer request, including any a general description of the process the business will information the consumer must provide; instructions about how an authorized agent can make a request on a consumer's behalf; and a contact for questions or concerns about the business's privacy policies and practices using a method reflecting the manner in which the business primarily interacts with the consumer. Additionally, the Regulations require that a business that has actual knowledge that it sells the personal information of minors

3

cslawreport.com

provide a description of the processes for:

The CCPA provides that a business shall not collect additional categories of personal information or use personal information collected for additional purposes without providing the consumer with "notice consistent with the notice at collection requirements."

The Regulations go beyond the CCPA notice requirement and require the business to directly notify the consumer and obtain explicit consent for the use of previously collected personal information "for a purpose materially different than what was previously disclosed to the consumer in the notice at collection."

The AG disagrees with comments that the CCPA "only requires an additional notice and prohibits a consumer-consent requirement" change been disclosed during the consumer's first engagement with the business." The AG further states that simply updating the and states that requiring explicit consent puts the consumer in the same position they would have been had the material

2) Explicit Consent Requirement for New Uses

The Regulations include two requirements that appear to go beyond the CCPA. In response to comments that these two provisions are outside the scope of the CCPA, however, the AG states in the FSOR that the ability to adopt regulations that "fill in details not specifically addressed by the CCPA, but fall within the scope of the CCPA" is inherent in the authority to adopt regulations as necessary to further the purposes of the

with the language, intent, and purpose of the CCPA."

1) Mobile Device Just-in-Time Notice application's basic functionality."

CCPA. The AG further states that the sections are "consistent of personal information from a consumer's mobile device for a purpose that the consumer would not reasonably expect. The notice must include a summary of the categories of personal

This requirement is not in the CCPA. The AG states in the FSOR that the provision is necessary "to provide transparency into Cybersecurity Law Report An Acuris company Notices also must be: available in the languages in which the business in its ordinary course provides contracts, disclaimers, sale privacy policy or providing notice without obtaining explicit consent does not serve the purpose of the CCPA. The Regulations require a "just-in-time" notice for the collection

Presentation of the Notices to know.

notice readable on smaller screens."

While businesses with account holders or that otherwise have contact information for consumers may be able to directly notify those consumers and obtain their consent, it is unclear how a business can directly notify and obtain consent from users for which it has no contact information.

The CCPA requires that the notices should be presented in a form that is reasonably accessible to consumers. Additionally, all required notices must use "plain straightforward language and avoid technical and legal jargon and be in a format that draws the consumer's attention to the notice and makes the

cslawreport.com

an email address for submitting requests.

The Regulations reiterate the CCPA provision regarding the to know. However, comments were submitted that the statute has not defined the term "exclusively online," to which the AG responded that they did not address the definition "in an effort to prioritize drafting regulations that operationalize and assist analysis is required to determine whether a regulation is necessary on this issue." The AG added that whether a business is operating in the immediate implementation of the law and that further "exclusively online" may be a fact-specific determination.

The Regulations require two or more designated methods for methods to use to submit requests, however, a business shall consider the methods by which it primarily interacts with in person, it should consider an in-person method such as a printed form, a tablet or portal that allows the consumer to submit an online form, or a telephone by which the consumer

A toll-free number is not required (however, as a practical matter, since many businesses have to have a toll-free number for a request to know, the toll-free number is a logical choice for requests to delete), but it is one of the acceptable methods, which also include, but are not limited to a: submitting requests to delete as well. When determining which consumers. For example, if the business interacts with consumers

Method for Submitting Requests to Delete can call the toll-free number.

requirement to provide an email address for submitting requests maintain an internet website must make the internet website available to consumer to submit requests

The Regulations provide that other acceptable methods include but are not limited to: designated email address; form submitted in person; or business has collected from the consumer (Right to Delete).

methods for submitting and responding to these requests.

Methods for Submitting Requests to Know at a minimum, a toll-free telephone number.

form submitted through the mail.

The statute further provides that businesses that:

The Regulations provide requirements and guidance relating to

The CCPA requires businesses to make available two or more designated methods for submitting requests to know, including,

The Regulations set forth that the businesses can require two steps by the consumer: (1) submission of the request; and (2) separate confirmation of the desire to have personal information deleted. Verification of Requests The CCPA defines a verifiable consumer request as a request the business can reasonably verify is from the consumer about whom the business has collected information, or a person authorized by the consumer to act on their behalf. The business is not required to provide information in response to requests it cannot verify.

The CCPA provides that a business may require authentication of the consumer that is reasonable in light of the nature of the personal information requested, but shall not require the consumer to create an account with the business in order to make the request.

The Regulations require the business to "establish, document person making a request to know or delete is the consumer about whom the business has collected information." In determining what method to use, the Regulations provide that companies process should be. The Regulations establish that personal information (identified in 1798.81.5), including unencrypted first name or first initial and last name in combination with Social Security number, driver's license or ID card number, medical information, is considered "presumptively sensitive."

The Regulations also offered guidance on other steps businesses

Consider whether the personal information provided by the consumer to verify is sufficiently robust to account number, credit or debit card number with code, or should take around the verification process, including:

and comply with a reasonable method for verifying that the link or form available online through a website; designated email address; form submitted in person; and form submitted through the mail.

Cybersecurity Law Report

protect against fraudulent requests or being spoofed or fabricated. Whenever feasible, match the identifying information provided by the consumer to the personal information of the consumer already maintained by the business, or use a third-party identity verification service that complies with the Regulations. Generally avoid requesting additional information for verification. If additional information is required, only use for verification and security and fraud prevention. Delete any new personal information collected for verification except as required for recordkeeping

Implement reasonable security measures to detect fraudulent identity verification activity and prevent unauthorized access to or deletion of a consumer's by the consumer with data points maintained by Requests for specific pieces of information – verify to a reasonably high degree of certainty, which may include: matching at least three data pieces of personal information provided by the consumer with personal information maintained by the business, and a signed declaration that the requestor is cslawreport.com

the consumer whose personal information is the

cslawreport.com

Cybersecurity Law Report An Acuris company Requests to delete – verify to a reasonable or an additional 45 calendar days when reasonably necessary so long as the consumer is provided notice of the extensions within the first 45 calendar-day period. The response period begins on the day that the business receives the request, regardless of the time required to verify and, if the business cannot verify the consumer within the 45 calendar-day time period, it may deny

The Regulations additionally require the company to confirm receipt within 10 business days and provide information about when the consumer can expect a response.

a general description of the verification process; and how the business will process the request including:

Responding to Requests to Know

An Acuris company

the notice of right to opt out.

Action Items

within 45 calendar days of receipt of the request. It also permits

The Regulations provide guidance with respect to searching information in response to requests to know. A business is not required to search for personal information if it: does not maintain personal information in a searchable or reasonably accessible format; maintains the personal information solely for legal or compliance purposes; does not sell personal information and does not use it for any commercial purpose; and describes to the consumer the categories of records that may contain personal information that it did not search because it meets the conditions.

For password protected accounts, the business may use the existing authentication process for the account. If the consumer does not have or cannot access a password protected account, the degree of certainty and information required for verification depends on the type of request: Requests for categories of information – verify to a reasonable degree of certainty, which may include matching at least two data points provided subject of the request.

requirements.

personal information.

the business.

ID number, financial account number, any health insurance or medical identification number, account password, security questions and answers or unique biometric data in a company's response to a request to know. However, the business should inform the consumer with sufficient particularity if it has collected that type of information. The Regulations further provide that when transmitting personal information to the consumer, businesses should use reasonable security measures. For password-protected accounts, businesses can comply with request to know by using a secure self-service portal for consumers to access, view and receive a portable copy of their personal information.

cslawreport.com

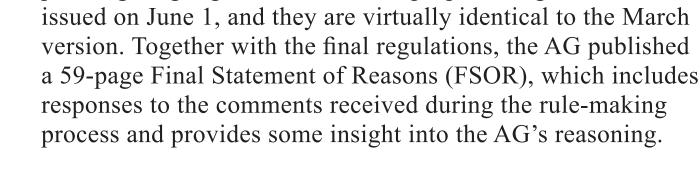

- personal information and the consumer has not already made a request to opt out, the business shall ask the consumer if that
- given the impending July 1 enforcement date, if they have not done so already, companies should take the following steps
 - ensure you have a notice at or before the point of collection informing consumers of the personal information collected and the purpose for which it will be used.
 - respect to substance and presentation. Identify where you collect personal information and

The Regulations prohibit the disclosure of Social Security number, driver's license number, or other government-issued

The Regulations require the business to inform the consumer whether or not it has complied with the request. If the business has complied with the request, it is required to inform the consumer that it will maintain a record of the request as required by the Regulations. If the business denies the request, it must: inform the consumer that it will not comply with the request and describe the basis for the denial unless prohibited by law;

See also CSLR's two-part series on CCPA priorities: "Turning Legislation Prep Into a Program Shift" (Jun. 5, 2019); "Tackling

- To comply with the CCPA and the accompanying Regulations,

Cybersecurity Law Report An Acuris company At a webinar on July 7, 2020, California Supervising Attorney General Stacey Schesser confirmed that the AG had issued June 17, 2020)

Notice Requirements

An Acuris company

Contents and Presentation of Notice at Collection The CCPA requires that a business provide notice at or before the point of collection of the categories of personal information to be collected and the purposes for which the categories of personal information shall be used. The notice must also include or, in the case of offline notices, disclose where the consumer can find:

a link to the business's privacy policy; and if the business sells personal information examples" of how the business "may" present the notice: Online collection. Post a "conspicuous link" to the personal information.

See "How to Approach CCPA's Under-16 Opt-In Consent" (Feb. 12, 2020). Requirements That Go Beyond the Statute information being collected and a link to the full notice at collection. business practices that defy consumers' reasonable expectations, particularly when those uses are not reasonably related to an announcements and other information to consumers. reasonably accessible to consumers with disabilities. For online notices, businesses must follow "generally recognized industry standards" such as the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines, version 2.1 of June 5, 2018 from the World Wide Web Consortium. Business Practices for Handling Consumer Requests The CCPA grants consumers the rights to request that a business disclose information about the personal information that it has collected about the consumer (Right to Know) and to request deletion of personal information about the consumer that the operate exclusively online and have a direct relationship with consumers from whom they collect personal information shall only be required to provide

An Acuris company

should consider the type, sensitivity and value of the information, the risk of harm to the consumer by unauthorized access or deletion, and the likelihood of fraud. The more valuable or sensitive the information, the greater the risk of harm, or the higher likelihood of fraud, the more stringent the verification reasonably high degree of certainty depending on the sensitivity of the data and the risk to the consumer from deleting the information. Timeframe for Responding to Consumer Requests The CCPA requires a business to respond to consumer requests the request.

delete the consumer's personal information that is not subject to an exception; and not use the consumer's personal information retained for any other purpose than provided by that exception. If a business that denies a consumer's request to delete sells individual would like to opt out of the sale of his or her personal information and shall include either the contents of or a link to Immediate Notice and Consumer Request

Cybersecurity Law Report

now: 1. Review and update your privacy policy to ensure it meets the CCPA requirements as well as the more detailed notice requirements in the Regulations with

Make sure all required notices, including the privacy

Responding to Requests to Delete The Regulations provide three methods for complying with requests to delete: permanently and completely erase the personal information on its existing systems with the exception of archived or back-up systems; deidentify the personal information; or aggregate the personal information.

Data Subject Rights Requests and Vendors" (Jun. 12, 2019).

8

©2020 Cybersecurity Law Report. All rights reserved.

ments of the CCPA and the Regulations.

policy and other notices at collection meet accessibility standards and are in the appropriate language. Ensure you have a written consumer rights management policy and verification process that meets the require-