

Cory J. Kopitzke

Associate

Cory Kopitzke is an attorney in the firm's Health Law Practice Group and a member of the firm's Fraud & Abuse Compliance and Litigation Team. Cory helps clients navigate government investigations and administrative litigation, Medicare and Medicaid compliance, and licensure and enrollment issues. He also assists clients in drafting and negotiating agreements utilized in change of ownership transactions undertaken by a broad range of health care providers, including nursing facilities, home health agencies, and assisted living facilities.

Cory has significant experience representing clients before administrative agencies, including the Office of Inspector General (OIG) for the United States Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). He also represents clients in parallel government and corporate investigations. Cory is well-versed on issues surrounding program exclusions, claims of health care fraud and abuse, Stark Law, the Anti-Kickback Statute, suspensions, and civil monetary penalties.

Cory actively supports Quarles & Brady's mission to provide legal services to indigent persons and to organizations that serve indigent persons by representing them in a variety of matters, including civil rights litigation, before the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana.
