

Edward A. Salanga

Partner / National Chair, Litigation & Dispute Resolution Practice Group

Edward Salanga represents businesses in construction and commercial litigation disputes. As part of his construction practice, Mr. Salanga represents lenders, owners and contractors in contract negotiations, contract performance and payment claims, scheduling and delay claims, construction defect disputes, title insurance claims and mechanics' lien, stop notice and bonding issues. As part of his commercial litigation practice, Mr. Salanga represents direct sales and multi-level marketing companies in state and federal regulatory compliance and securities matters, as well as complex commercial litigation disputes, including class actions. Mr. Salanga also represents manufacturers of consumer water treatment products, plumbing components, heavy earth moving and industrial equipment, and material suppliers in product liability and breach of warranty disputes.

Mr. Salanga is the National Chair of the firm's Litigation & Dispute Resolution Group. He has also led the firm's Real Estate and Construction Litigation Team.

Mr. Salanga's construction experience includes:

- Representing one of the nation's largest public power utilities in a breach of warranty dispute involving power plant equipment.
- Representing a manufacturer of plumbing component parts in multi-district class action residential construction defect and product liability litigation.
- Representing a major residential property developer in disputes against a civil engineering firm, a water company, and homeowners' associations, arising out of various large-scale residential developments in both Phoenix and Tucson, Arizona.
- Representing one of the largest contractors in the nation in various construction and contracting-related matters in Arizona, including a multimillion-dollar dispute brought by a school district over a wastewater treatment plant, that resulted in a dismissal of all claims.
- Serving as Arizona litigation counsel for the world's leading manufacturer of heavy construction equipment, including second-chairing a breach of warranty trial in Maricopa County Superior Court that resulted in a defense verdict and a full award of attorneys' fees.
- Representing lenders in connection with multimillion-dollar deficiency and lender liability claims arising from construction projects around the Valley.
- Serving as primary outside counsel in the western region for a
