

Jacob Bradley

Partner

Jacob Bradley is a member of the firm's Commercial Litigation Practice Group. Jake concentrates his practice in business litigation and white collar criminal defense. His practice is focused on solving his clients' litigation challenges, including pre-suit negotiations and alternative dispute resolution. He has defended companies and individuals before state trial and appellate courts as well as federal district and bankruptcy courts.

In addition to his general business litigation practice, Jake has extensive experience advising and defending financial institutions regarding predatory lending, consumer protection, and lender liability issues, including violations of RESPA, TILA, FCRA, FDCPA, TCPA, HOEPA, and various state consumer protection statutes. He also has experience in commercial collection and foreclosure actions, including defending counterclaims filed by borrowers and guarantors.

Jake also has experience representing individuals facing criminal allegations. This experience includes representing undergraduate students in disciplinary proceedings and professionals before their respective licensing boards.

Before practicing law, Jake was a licensed financial specialist at a national bank where he gained experience in investment sales, consumer lending, and business lending.
