Associate

Patrick Taylor is an attorney in the firm's Business Law Practice Group. He focuses his practice on representing private equity, middle market, and publicly held companies in acquisitions and divestitures, drafting complex commercial agreements, and counseling privately held businesses.

Some of Patrick's recent experience includes assisting with the following:

- Divestiture by private equity client of a medical packaging company with numerous international operations, with a sale price in excess of $500,000,000.
- Divestiture by large publicly traded client of a large, international division.
- Developing standard terms and conditions and form contracts for a privately held client and advising the client regarding risk mitigation strategies.
- Corporate restructuring of a $1 billion privately held company, in order to mitigate the risk associated with certain business lines.
- Drafting numerous supply agreements for clients in various industries, including food products, packaging, manufacturing, robotics, and automotive.
- Advising clients on compliance with Wisconsin's automatic renewal law governing business contracts (Wis. Stat. 134.49).
- Providing pro bono legal advice to local business startups, and assisting with creation of form contracts and standard terms and conditions.

While in law school, Patrick served as a judicial intern for both Justice Patrick Crooks of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin and Chief Judge Richard Brown of the Wisconsin Court of Appeals, where he performed research in several areas of civil and criminal law and wrote draft opinions and bench memoranda.
